DEM'S LAST GASP

• WWII, spate of regulations, liberal judges, more on the docket

By the AFP Staff

With less than two months to go before President-elect Donald Trump officially takes the Oval Office on Jan. 20, Biden officials are doing everything they can to provoke a war with Russia, slam new regulations on Americans, and speed-appoint judges in advance of the conservative takeover of Washington. Trump has promised to end many of these, but the most dangerous move—starting World War III—is a matter of deep concern.

On Nov. 17, Trump's son, Donald Trump Jr., took to the social media platform "X" to declare, "The military industrial complex seems to want to make sure they get WWII going before my father has a chance to create peace and save lives."

His statement came after President Joe Biden inexplicably authorized the Ukrainian military to fire U.S.-made missiles deep inside Russia. Only two days later, news reports came out that Biden had also given Ukraine the green light to start using landmines against the Russia military as it continues its advance in the southeast, taking more and more Ukrainian land every day.

In the run-up to the election, Trump said one of his top priorities in office will be to negotiate a lasting peace deal between Ukraine and Russia.

JOE BIDEN

Aware of what's happening?

Up until this point, the Biden administration had barred Ukraine from launching missiles into Russia. Why start now unless the plan is to dangerously escalate the war and drag the United States into it?

And that's not all.

According to reports, Biden officials have also been ramping up efforts to slap even more regulations on American businesses. According to the think tank American Action Forum, since Biden took office four years ago, Democrats have created a whopping 11,074 new regulations.

In the last month alone, Biden's Environmental Protection Agency slammed a host of new regulations on oil and gas companies.

The Biden administration is also throwing out billions of taxpayer dollars to solar panel companies and wind farms in a mad dash before Trump moves into the White House.

Trump has famously said he plans to dismantle Biden's climate policies that cost taxpayers money and burden U.S. businesses, a good move that will cut federal expenditures. (See more on pages 16-17.)

Finally, the Biden administration is moving as quickly as possible to approve as many new liberal judges before conservatives are back in power and can stop it.

The Associated Press reports that over a dozen judges have advanced out of the Senate Judiciary Committee in the past week. Eight more judicial nominations are awaiting committee votes, and six are waiting for committee hearings.

Trump excoriated the Democrats for this frenzied gallop of approvals, saying, "No judges should be approved during this period of time because the Democrats are looking to ram through their judges as the Republicans fight over leadership."

But there's even more.

In the waning days of Biden's presidency, Democrats also are trying to stick taxpayers with millions in student loans by canceling legitimate college debt with the stroke of a pen. They are seeking to send even more money to Ukraine and Israel. They want to hand out billions more of taxpayer dollars to friends and benefactors.

In the final days, Democrats are doing all they can to enrich their donors and their base—all because they know, after so many years, the federal feeding frenzy may finally be coming to a grinding halt. ★
