SANITY WINS IN ITALY

By John Friend

The dramatic rise of right-wing populist leaders across Europe in 2022 comes as citizens there are growing increasingly frustrated by escalating immigrant crime, sky-high prices, attacks on traditional family structure, continued Covid-19 lockdowns, and globalism.

Just this month, this surge was demonstrated in Italy where a right-wing populist coalition led by the fire-brand Giorgia Meloni of the Brothers of Italy party dominated at the ballot box. It marked a resounding defeat of the pro-EU technocratic coalition government headed by former Goldman Sachs banker Mario Draghi.

According to the latest reports, Meloni's party received over 25% of the vote, while her coalition partners Matteo Salvini and Silvio Berlusconi and their respective parties each netted 9% and 8% of the overall vote.

The snap elections were called earlier this year following the collapse of Draghi's government in July, largely due to an economic and energy crisis plaguing both Italy and the broader European continent that is directly tied to the absurd economic sanctions of Russia as a result of its war with Ukraine. Draghi also presided over strict Covid lockdowns in Italy, which included severe restrictions on private businesses, constant talks of vaccine passports and mandatory vaccination, and other misguided, unnecessary, and unpopular policies. Additionally, the on-going migrant crisis continues to impact Italy, a nation on the frontlines of the invasion of Europe by economic migrants and purported refugees fleeing the Third World.

"If we are called to govern this nation, we will do it for everyone, we will do it for all Italians and we will do it with the aim of uniting the people," the 45-year-old Meloni said following the elections. "Italy chose us. We will not betray it as we never have."

Many have expressed outrage at Meloni's commonsense criticisms of mass migration, the homosexual agenda, the attack upon and loss of national identity, and globalism more generally. She is a strong proponent of the traditional family unit and parenting, and proudly champions her Italian heritage. She also recognizes the important role women play in society as wives and mothers.

During a speech that has been praised by conservatives, populists, and nationalists, Meloni denounced the insidious globalist forces that are at war with traditional values and sovereign nation states, a theme she has repeatedly emphasized much to the chagrin of the far left.

"Why is the family an enemy? Why is the family so frightening?" Meloni asked, referring to the globalist plutocrats that have long attacked the traditional family unit. "Because it is our identity. Because everything that defines us is now an enemy for those who would like us to no longer have an identity and to simply be consumer slaves."

Meloni went on to explain how these insidious forces attack national and religious identity as well as the very concepts of gender and family.

"When I no longer have an identity or roots, then I will be the perfect slave at the mercy of financial speculators," she powerfully concluded. "We will defend God, country, and family."

For her eloquent and righteous defense of traditional values, Meloni has been denounced as a "far-right demagogue" that must be stopped. The recent Italian election reminds Americans, as the 2022 midterm elections approach, that the bigger issues at play are the forces of populism, tradition, and family against the forces of globalism, anarchy, and financial and intellectual slavery. ★
