WORST OF THE WORST

- Tens of thousands of extremely dangerous illegals rounded up

By AFP Staff

After a series of high-profile blunders, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) has done something that all Americans—except for the most radical activists on the left—can agree is positive. DHS officials have created a searchable website that documents the thousands of violent criminal illegal aliens who have been rounded up in the Trump administration's aggressive immigration program.

DHS's extensive website is thousands of pages long and features at least five criminal illegal aliens on each page. Each of them has a short profile listed, and each has been convicted or implicated in heinous crimes that include child rape, sexual assault, murder, and illicit drug dealing.

Since Donald Trump took office for the second time on Jan. 20, 2025, it has not always been smooth sailing in regard to his deportation policy.

For example, on June 12, 2025, Trump was widely criticized after he announced a pause on immigration arrests for illegal immigrants who work in the hotel, gambling, and construction industries—all businesses that exploit cheap illegal labor over American workers.

Shortly before that, the Trump administration had received serious criticism—including from this populist newspaper—after his immigration officials began arresting and jailing legal immigrants for the crimes of criticizing Israel and its genocidal war across Palestine.

Finally, there have been multiple reports that innocent individuals who are legally in the United States have been caught up in immigration raids and forced to spend months in detention camps around the United States. On page two in this week's issue, AFP profiles one such man, Seamus Cullen, an Irish citizen who is currently languishing in an immigration detention site in El Paso, Texas, despite having lived and worked here for the last 20 years.

After these missteps, the Trump administration needed to refocus attention on what matters: removing violent illegal immigrants, who the Biden administration had allowed to remain in the United States despite their convictions. DHS's website does this.

Some of the worst of the worst, taken off U.S. streets, include:

- Sahal Osman Shidane, an illegal immigrant from Somalia convicted of raping a child in Minneapolis;
- Francisco Jorge-Salgado, an illegal immigrant from Cuba convicted of selling deadly drugs in Minneapolis;
- Jaime Tirado-Hernandez, an illegal immigrant from Mexico convicted of murder in Minneapolis;
- Kevin Antonio Chevez-Garcia, an illegal immigrant from El Salvador convicted of sexual exploitation of a child in Weld County, Colo.;
- Bel Ortiz-Garcia, an illegal immigrant from Mexico convicted of driving drunk and killing a U.S. citizen in Represa, Calif.;
- Gjon Mhili, an illegal immigrant from Albania convicted of selling heroin in the United States;
- Jeffrey Salazar Ledezma, an illegal immigrant from Costa Rica convicted of child rape in Los Angeles;
- Muhammed Ramadan, an illegal immigrant from Jordan convicted of murder in Orlando, Fla.; and
- Shayan Kahhal, an illegal immigrant from Iran convicted of raping a woman in Norfolk, Va.

This is just a tiny sample of the illegal criminal aliens, who had been convicted of vicious, violent crimes in the United States but had been idling in a jail cell at U.S. taxpayers' expense or still walking the streets. Thanks to immigration authorities, these men are now either locked up in detention centers, awaiting deportation orders, or have been put on a plane and sent back to their home countries—much to the relief of all of the Americans who had to live next door to them.
