BILDERBERG SECRET NO MORE

AFP REPORTERS, HUNDREDS OF ACTIVISTS, FOREIGN PRESS EXPOSE GLOBALISTS

By James P. Tucker Jr.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland—The globalist group known as Bilderberg gathered June 9-12 in this small, picturesque town. For the first time ever, though, hundreds of activists and journalists were there to greet them, holding multiple rallies over the course of the weekend with the intent of exposing the world’s top elites to public scorn.

Bilderberg luminaries were speaking loudly and profanely about patriots in Europe and the United States who have been exposing their secret meetings for years. They expressed their anger getting off airplanes and while entering their meeting site.

“If we are to accomplish our goals of population control and a balanced world economy, a major war in the Mideast is a necessary, if cruel, tool,” said Richard Perle of the neo-conservative American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research. “The current fighting must expand to cover the entire Mideast except for Israel.”

“But these [expletive] characters who force this into the European newspapers make our mission difficult,” said Carl Bildt, former prime minister of Sweden. “I hope we can avoid them this year, but I am not optimistic. Look how hard they make it for Obama. He’s a good man, but he has to pretend to be unhappy about Libya.”

“We must find a way to hold our meetings so these [expletives] don’t find out,” said Peter Sutherland, chairman of Goldman Sachs International and a leader of both the Trilateral Commission and Bilderberg.

“Perhaps we could arrange it so the guards are not visible outside and members trickle in over a period of time in private cars without the windshield decorations. But some of our pompous guys, like Henry [Kissinger], would be unhappy. . . .”

Bilderberg boys typically arrive in long, black limos with police escorts, blaring sirens and with a special sticker in a corner of the windshield.

Justice Secretary Kenneth Clarke, a Conservative member of the British Parliament and longtime Bilderberg luminary, is banned from this year’s meeting, according to The Guardian of London. He must have done something naughty.

Bilderberg, for a bunch of crooks, is sensitive about having criminals in their midst. That’s why George Soros (“still a good friend”) is banned and recent IMF chief Dominique Strauss-Kahn will never be back.

Years ago, this paperboy challenged Clarke, eyeball to eyeball, on Bilderberg. He admitted that the goal was world government and a common currency.

Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, who helped found Bilderberg, was banned soon after because of his Lockheed bribery scandal. Queen Beatrix has continued attending all these years. ★

PERSONAL FROM THE EDITOR

Big Breakthrough

What would have been unheard of even a year or two ago actually happened: A major U.S. news network acknowledged Bilderberg. You can get up off the floor. You read that correctly.

Although commentator Judge Andrew Napolitano's Fox News show, Freedom Watch, did not present a long news segment on this annual meeting of the rich and powerful, he did offer some provocative commentary, arguing with two other skeptical news wonks that meetings of highly influential people which are "private, secret and unwritten," are not a good idea, especially when major political and economic policies are being molded.

As he spoke, a list of Bilderberg participants scrolled down the left side of the screen. Napolitano, oftentimes a dependable spokesman for freedom issues, is to be commended for breaking the U.S. media taboo on Bilderberg since the internationalist snobs started meeting in 1954.

Westbrook Pegler, the columnist of yore, did yeoman's work in America during Bilderberg's early days. His widely read column raised some awareness, but soon it was up to Liberty Lobby's Willis Carto and Jim Tucker to keep Bilderberg news flowing in the U.S.

Considering the earlier-than-ever departure of Bilderberg attendees amid often relentless news coverage, was this year's Bilderberg meeting in Switzerland the last of the large-scale meetings where all these movers and shakers meet at the same place? Will they have to have smaller meetings, use Internet conferencing and stop their now well-exposed practice of congregating under one roof?

If these elitists have been too exposed to continue with business as usual, all news organizations that care about more than the typical "news, weather and sports" should take note of this situation and start thinking of how the Bilderberg group might alter its operations. Trusted friends and sources have suggested that other meetings may already be quietly held apart from the main Bilderberg meetings.

Whatever the situation, AFP intends to find out. In the meantime, see our varied coverage of the Bilderberg 2011 meeting in this edition's four-page centerspread. Thanks to all of those who helped make the coverage work, including, of course, long-time AFP Bilderberg hound and colleague Jim Tucker, Angie Anderson, Manfred Petritsch, Vit Jedlicka, We Are Change/Switzerland, Bilderberg-Transparency.org, Chad Buchanan, Paul Dorneanu, Alex Jones and his Infowars.com website, and others too numerous to mention.

Treasury Resists Fort Knox Audit

Are all the ingots in Fort Knox really made out of gold? Are there even any gold bars left in the depository in Kentucky? These questions were posed by NBC's business news website, which reported recently on the Treasury Department's concerns about new legislation from Rep. Ron Paul (R-Texas) that calls for an audit of Fort Knox. Treasury officials are so concerned that they released a public document whining about the cost and manpower needed to perform the job. Treasury estimates the cost at $15 million, claiming "the process would take about 30 minutes to verify the gold content of each bar, or 350,000 man hours; to do that would take 400 people working for six months."

CHECKING FOR HERSELF

Former Rep. Cynthia McKinney (D-Ga.) was in Tripoli in June on a fact-finding mission, looking into allegations that NATO is attacking civilians, reports Russia Today. Ms. McKinney said she toured the hospital there and saw many civilians who had been hit by NATO weapons. Also, she said she visited the university in Tripoli where she witnessed damage caused by NATO.

BUYING UP A TOWN NEAR YOU

According to Goldman Sachs's 2010 filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Wall Street firm expects to be involved with "ownership and operation of public services, such as airports, toll roads and shipping ports, as well as power generation facilities, physical commodities and other commodities infrastructure components, both within and outside the United States." The bankers are increasingly acting like vultures, circling so-called "distressed assets," especially those maintained by bankrupt cities and states.

WHY NOT DEFAULT?

Ben Bernanke, the head of the privately owned and controlled Federal Reserve, showed his true bankers' stripes when he recently said that defaulting on the national debt by not raising the debt ceiling is "not an option." While urging the government to negotiate cutting spending, Bernanke said, "the debt limit is the wrong tool for that important job." AFP believes that defaulting on the debt is a viable solution to the massive debt problem.

White Teachers Deemed Unfit in Philadelphia

FOUR WHITE TEACHERS at a Philadelphia elementary school have filed lawsuits in federal court alleging that they have been victims of reverse racism. The black principal of the school deemed them "unfit to teach African-American students" because of the color of their skin—the teachers were white. The teachers contend that the largely black Department of Education of Philadelphia backs the principal's hostility toward them. In addition, they say they fear not only for their jobs but for their own safety and that of their families. Mifflin Elementary School is a primarily black public school in a white neighborhood. Its previous, white principal had been forced to resign under charges of discrimination. This is the face of forced integration.

DRUG TESTING

What has the crack "hoes" and assorted drug addicts in such an uproar? It is Florida's recent legislation requiring welfare applicants to undergo drug testing. Florida's Gov. Rick Scott (R) said his state will not "subsidize" anyone's drug addiction. He explained, "I know it's not right for taxpayer money to be paying for someone's drug addiction."

ARSENIC IN CHICKEN

The Food and Drug Administration admitted in early June that the poisonous mineral arsenic from an ingredient in chicken feed shows up in meat that the food agency tested from grocery stores. FDA officials tried to soft pedal the disclosure by adding that there's only a little bit in the chicken Americans eat.

RIOTS IN GREECE

Over 100,000 protesters in Athens took to the streets recently as the country was virtually shut down. Resistance to austerity measures and impending loss of sovereignty to international bankers due to restructuring of debt have Greeks on the brink of a revolution. Toppling of the government and the ouster of IMF and EU tyrants could trigger the collapse of the euro and the NWO globalization machine.

HUMANITARIAN AID?

The biggest foreign holders of the United States' national debt such as China, Brazil, Russia, Mexico and India, also get substantial amounts of foreign aid, according to a recently released report. One has to wonder how these countries can afford to buy our debt, yet have no money to fund their own programs such as fighting HIV, illegal drug trade and even environmental issues. It's like seeing your banker panhandling on the street corner.

Bill Clinton Proposes Agency to Monitor Thought

By Bill White

Former President Bill Clinton has proposed the creation of a new federal or UN agency to regulate the Internet. The agency, which resembles the Ministry of Truth in George Orwell's classic 1984, would have a mandate to determine whether individuals or organizations on the Internet were publishing untrue material. They would then correct it, either by publishing their own version of the truth, or potentially arresting, fining and imprisoning those who do not conform to its version of truth.

In a recent television appearance with Zionist Mati Kochavi, Clinton floated the idea of introducing a federal cyber-truth expert.

"I think it would be a legitimate thing to do . . . to set up some sort of agency . . . an independent federal agency . . . and their mandate would be . . . to identify . . . relevant factual errors . . . on the Internet," Clinton stated.

This proposal is the latest round in an almost two-decades-long war waged by liberal and Jewish organizations to control content published on the Internet. During Clinton's first term, the Simon Wiesenthal Center and Anti-Defamation League floated proposals to create a government agency that would regulate Internet truth and prohibit most non-commercial speech.

In 1996, Rabbi Abraham Cooper issued a statement entitled, "Wiesenthal Center Calls on Internet Providers to Adopt Voluntary Standards of Ethics."

Cooper stated, "The Internet should be purely for commercial purposes" and urged Internet service providers to refuse "racists, advocates of violence or homophobes" access to the net.

"Traditionally, print and broadcast media around the world have refused to provide these groups with a plat-

"Let's say the U.S. did it, it would have to be an independent federal agency that no president could countermand or anything else because people wouldn't think you were just censoring the news and giving a different falsehood out." —Bill Clinton form for their propaganda, and they have refused to allow these groups to manipulate them in the name of the First Amendment," Cooper said in his press release. "Radio and television executives and newspaper editors have long understood that the First Amendment protects our citizenry from interference by the government, but does not obligate media channels to publish or distribute materials they consider false, inflammatory, hateful and unfair. It is the Wiesenthal Center's position that such an understanding should extend to the Internet as well."

Internet regulation has become a priority for the federal government. Today, the American system is based on manipulating masses of people into believing they possess power and freedom while tightly regulating their lives through sophisticated methods of social control. If these methods were to break down, the present American government could not stand. Thus, it is important for the governing powers to create and regulate a common mythology that provides guidance for the way people lead their lives, including regulated alternative lifestyles that do not challenge the status quo.

In most Western countries, liberal groups have pressured parliaments into passing laws outlawing information and ideas they find offensive. However, such efforts have failed in the United States, and regulation through centralized control of access hasn't been effective because of low costs involved in gaining access to the Internet. Over the past 10 years, Jewish groups have targeted high-profile political opponents in the name of "fighting terrorism." This process began with the arrest of historian Ernst Zundel and continues today with the imprisonment of free-speech lawyer Edgar Steele. ★

Why Is U.S. Government Moving Installations to Center of Nation?

By Keith Johnson

The world is going through changes, not just geopolitical changes, but those that have the potential to transform the very topography of our planet. The United States is not immune from such tragedies and has recently seen a precipitous rise in its own extreme weather events. Deadly tornados, monstrous hurricanes, droughts, torrential rains and severe flooding along the Mississippi and Missouri rivers have plagued states from north to south, forcing evacuations and wreaking untold billions of dollars in property damage. While many are quick to blame these violent Earth changes on human-caused “global warming,” there could be another explanation.

“Global warming as promoted by Al Gore and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration [NOAA] is a hoax,” says John Moore, producer of the 2008 documentary Global Warming: What the Government Isn't Telling You. “It’s subterfuge, the purpose of which is to obfuscate, confuse and misdirect people from what is really going on.”

Moore is a former Green Beret and graduate of the U.S. Military Intelligence School. He is now a licensed private investigator and hosts a daily radio show on the Republic Broadcasting Network.

On June 9, Moore spoke with AFP to discuss what he believes to be the cause of these planetary changes.

“The government’s cover story is that the planet is heating up due to human activity,” says Moore. “They came up with this cover story to give people hope that we could slow this down, none of which is true, of course.”

Since the spring of 2000, Moore has conducted interviews with researchers, scientists, Navy veterans and a former U.S. intelligence officer whose testimonies share a common thread. Moore claims that all give reference to what is commonly referred to as “the Tenth Planet,” Wormwood or Planet X. Nibiru is another name.

Moore said this large planetary body and its quarter-million-mile debris field, allegedly first spotted by NASA’s Pioneer 10 space probe in 1979, makes its way through our solar system every 3,600 years. As it gets closer, it interacts with the Sun and the planets. Earth thus receives increased amounts of electrical and solar wind energy.

“This causes all sorts of problems,” says Moore, “like violent climate changes, rising ocean levels, 200-mile-an-hour winds, earthquakes, volcanoes and so forth.”

In the late 1980s, while serving in his official capacity as the supervising astronomer for the U.S. Naval Observatory, Dr. Robert S. Harrington appeared in a videotaped interview at his office in Washington, D.C. and spoke about Wormwood in frank terms. He described it as a planetary body three to five times the size of Earth with a massive iron-nickel core.

In 2005, Moore’s research reached a critical turning point when he debriefed Steven Canfield, a retired veteran of the U.S. Navy Submarine Corps. Canfield claims to have participated in a classified military briefing in 1985. According to Moore, “At that briefing, they were shown a map of America with new coastlines. The Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts are all flooded anywhere from 50 to 100 miles inland, and the Mississippi Valley is a river 50 to 100 miles wide and a couple hundred feet deep.”

The oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico recently wreaked havoc on the Gulf Stream. The Gulf Stream is in essence the conveyor belt that heats up the North Atlantic. Combined with this disaster, and the introduction of mass amounts of fresh water from melting glaciers from Greenland, the entire weather pattern of the Atlantic region has been sent into chaos.

That same year in 2005, Moore penned a paper entitled “No Need for Panic,” which can be accessed on his website, TheLibertyMan.com. In that paper, Moore wrote about the Gulf Stream being fragile and at risk of stopping altogether. As predicted—but well ahead of schedule—the Gulf Stream did stop in 2010.

“The engine that drives the Gulf Stream is the salt content of the ocean,” says Moore. “For decades, melting fresh water ice from Greenland and the Antarctic has been reducing the salt content of all the oceans and the Gulf Stream. As the salt content is reduced, the mass and velocity of the Gulf Stream is being reduced as well.”

Moore blames BP’s recent oil spill on the early collapse. He states, “The gulf loop current was broken by the oil spill. It has not restarted, and scientists such as [prominent Italian theoretical physicist] Dr. Gianluigi Zangari have said it won’t restart.”

While the government has been close-lipped about preparations for catastrophes, there are indications that infrastructure relocations are well under way.

Moore states, “If you look at the locations of FEMA camps around the nation, you’ll notice that only a couple are located in coastal regions. All the rest are inland.”

That’s not all. In 2005, the CIA announced that it would be moving its domestic operations from Langley, Va. to Denver, Colo. In 2009, the NSA announced that they would house their new computer mainframes in the desert outside of Salt Lake City. NASA has also decided to move many of its coastal operations to inland “safe areas.” The Plum Island research facility—which conducts sensitive biological experiments on an offshore mound of dirt—is now being relocated to the heart of North America: Manhattan, Kansas. ★

Spain’s High Court Rules for Free Speech

Translated from www.Kreuz.net

The Spanish Supreme Court in Madrid ruled on June 3 that critics of the Holocaust ideology can no longer be persecuted, even when this criticism is connected directly to pro-Nazi materials, reports the news website GlobalFire.tv.

The decision means the end of the Spanish Holocaust denial law 607.2, which was pushed through in 1996 by the conservative government of Jose Maria Aznar. The law had been cobbled together, following the pattern of the muzzle laws in present-day, Nazi-obsessed Germany. Aznar was originally active with the conservative Falangistas independientes or “Independent Falangists,” and with a similarly aligned student organization in the 1970s.

The Supreme Court confirmed that the law is repugnant to the right of free expression of opinion guaranteed by the Spanish constitution. The judges did not side with the argument that contesting the Holocaust would injure Jews or threaten their existence. They declared that, often, someone or some group is going to be offended by the free expression of opinion. In other words, the state cannot make the fundamental human right of free expression of opinion dependent upon the sensitivity of individuals or particular groups.

Presiding Judge Adolfo Prego de Oliver y Tolivar summed up the ruling in this way: “To advocate an ideology is not punishable, regardless with which ideology it may have to do.”

In order to avoid the example being set by today’s Germany, the Spanish justices said even heretical statements like the following are no longer punishable: “The Germans had every reason to burn the Jews; the Germans have never burned the Jews; blacks are culturally and socially on the lowest rung of humanity.”

These statements, according to Prego, are detestable. However, in a modern constitutional state, they cannot be punishable because, otherwise, the door would be opened wide to the persecution of differing opinions. However, the judge noted, statements, which call for violence, are still subject to prosecution. ★

CANCER ANSWER?

Invented by Engineer John Ellis, High Solubility Water™ produces GREAT blood flow and HIGH BLOOD OXYGEN THAT "CURES ANYTHING" (WASHINGTON POST as far back as 1/27/92)! As a result, it is now available in cosmetics and bottled water, while the savings in laundry detergents (which are destroying our water supplies) pays for the machine!! Customers have told us for years that because of the ability to remove contaminants, they were using a cup of high solubility tap water instead of detergents in their laundry! One man couldn't remove an oil stain from his shirt...our water removed it! NEVER drink ordinary distilled water with lower solubility than tap water. (John Ellis has an Engineering Degree that includes Steam Plant Design)

Background: The 80 year old inventor, a Choate School and Lafayette College Engineering graduate, invented a scientific measuring device as a 17 year old (still used worldwide). An Oil Well Engineer, Design Engineer at Douglas Aerospace and Honeywell Engineer, at age 30 he started his own business and invented a switch that operates (on-off) within .0001 of an inch. Honeywell and Military/Industrial users: "He's the only person that knows how to produce it!" In similar fashion, textbook science said "You can't change water properties"...he HAS for the benefit of mankind!

LIKE THE ONCOLOGISTS BELOW, REGULATORS REMEMBER WHAT THEY LEARNED IN MEDICAL SCHOOL FROM TWO TIME NOBEL PRIZE WINNER OTTO WARBURG M.D.: "CANCER CELLS CAN'T SURVIVE IN HIGH BLOOD OXYGEN!" THAT'S THE KEY!! WE DISCOVERED HOW TO GET MORE OXYGEN INTO THE BLOOD STREAM BY INCREASING THE SOLUBILITY OF WATER AND THE RESULTS CAN BE MEASURED NON-INVASIVELY ON THE SKIN! THAT'S WHY REGULATORS WON'T ALLOW "ALTERNATIVE CANCER CURES"! NONE PROVIDE THE REQUIRED HIGH BLOOD OXYGEN LEVEL. In addition, cancer can go into remission spontaneously!

This is how this was discovered: An M.D. that taught at the UCLA Medical School used our water to perform non-invasive tests that we can use because the results are measured on the SKIN (using Doppler Ultrasound) to see which water produced the best Blood Flow to the extremities (Blood is 94% water): "Nothing is even close to your water in getting blood to the extremities!!" This is because our water has higher SOLUBILITY (that a child can measure) than ANY other water!! When you increase the Solubility of water, blood flow increases and your Blood can absorb more oxygen coming into your LUNGS (simply oxygenating water doesn't get oxygen into the blood stream)! Regulators also allowed the product "Put It Where It Hurts" because in similar fashion, the results can be measured non-invasively on the SKIN!

I am an 80 year old Engineer and Inventor. When I was in Engineering School text book science said you couldn't increase the Solubility of water (Hydrogen Bond Angle) and some people still believe that. However, The Washington Times with a 600 million investment in Washington, DC has been a major influence and the Advertising Manager called me years ago to say they had at least 50 phone calls ranging from the Los Alamos Nuclear Lab to Johns Hopkins Hospital: "They all have your machines!" Los Alamos Scientists: "We were wrong! He is right!"

If you look at our website, the Ad Manager has a contact number to verify all these reports including his own great success story. With a full page ad in The Washington Times every week for 15 years, he knows more about the results better than anyone including reports from the top three Oncologists in the United States!

I understand the information you are providing is for educational purposes only. As stated above, this information is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure or prevent disease. In all health-related situations, qualified healthcare professionals should always be consulted.

Recently, since it's such a touchy subject, I was startled by the cancer comments from a caller so I said: "How would you know that? He said he was an Oncologist at Sloan for 30 years and since he retired without access to our machine, he wanted our E5 Machine!

He is just one of the retired Oncologists from Sloan that have bought our machines and mentioned that they all knew about Otto Warburg M.D. in Medical School and they wondered how many years it would take for somebody to figure this out! That made me realize that the Regulators obtained the same information in Medical School and that's why they won't allow "alternative cancer cures"! Since the results can be measured non-invasively on the skin, it has been widely reported in The Washington Post (1/27/92: 10,000 people/day, "Cures Anything") along with a description of our patents that include the method but not the proprietary information required to break down the bonds in water and increase the Solubility.

Investigative reporter Pat Shannan wrote about Otto Warburg M.D. and our machines in the American Free Press. LEARN MORE...it could save your life! Congressional Report Condemns DOJ's Tragic Project Gunrunner

By Dave Gahary

A 51-page joint House and Senate report just released confirms what AMERICAN FREE PRESS has been reporting since January: A “reckless” program approved by Attorney General Eric Holder’s Department of Justice (DOJ) to facilitate sales of over 2,500 “assault-style weapons” to U.S. gun buyers in order to identify members of trafficking networks who funnel these weapons to Mexico’s deadliest drug cartels, was responsible for the death of Customs and Border Protection (CBP) agent Brian Terry and will lead to many more deaths in years to come.

The report, titled “The Department of Justice’s Operation Fast and Furious: Accounts of ATF Agents,” prepared for Rep. Darrell E. Issa (R-Calif.) and Sen. Charles E. Grassley (R-Iowa), identified a procedure called “gunwalking,” which simply means that law enforcement allows suspect buyers to walk away with the gun, as the main culprit of this “hapless” operation.

Interviews with agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (BATFE) comprise the bulk of the report, accompanied by several incriminating emails from the agents’ superiors. “Fast and Furious” was an operation associated with the lead project called “Gunrunner.”

AFP reporters Pat Shannan, Victor Thorn and Frank Whalen have been covering this story since two AK-47s were found near Terry’s lifeless body near the border between the U.S. and Mexico in December 2010. Some of the weapons that the cartel conspirators were allowed to walk away with included “AK-47 variants, Barrett .50 caliber sniper rifles, .38 caliber revolvers, and FN Five-Seven” tactical assault pistols.

Shannan posited that this fiasco provides more evidence to “close down” the BATFE. Thorn showed how Gunrunner has added to the violence in the Southwest, possibly aiding in the “murder of U.S. ranchers and lawmen, a beheading in Arizona, Hispanic sex slaves being transported into states such as Georgia, kidnapping children and trafficking in human organs.” Whalen goes further, postulating that the ultimate aim of Project Gunrunner is more stringent gun control.

The refusal of Holder’s DOJ to fully cooperate with this investigation and President Barack Obama’s “implying a need for more gun control” while “in Mexico on April 16, 2009,” while Gunrunner was in full swing, seems to add weight to this theory.

Typically, all the mainstream media, except CBS, either ignored or downplayed this explosive story, as it was again left to AFP to dole out the truth to its readers.

As the report sadly notes in the section on Terry’s murder:

Agent Terry did not die in vain. His passing exposed the practice of knowingly allowing the transfer of guns to suspected straw purchasers. [BATFE] now maintains it no longer condones this dangerous

A joint congressional hearing uncovered evidence that the Justice Department let straw buyers purchase firearms for Mexican drug cartels and carry them across the border into Mexico. Worse still, it is believed that one of these guns was used to murder U.S. Border Patrol agent Brian Terry in December 2010.

technique. The cessation of this practice will likely save lives on both sides of the border. Tragically, however, we will be seeing the ramifications of the policy to allow guns from Fast and Furious be transferred into the hands of suspected criminals for years to come. These weapons will continue to be found at crime scenes in the United States and Mexico. ★

World Facing New Super-Bug Strains of Diseases

By Frank Whalen

The media attention and global panic about a particularly nasty food-borne bacterial outbreak in Germany and abroad could be more revealing than the powers-that-be had hoped. Already, some are discussing the possibility of biological warfare, and by all accounts there could be something to that allegation.

The current case has sickened almost 3,000 people in nearly two dozen countries, with the death toll at 33 in Germany alone. At least 722 people have been diagnosed with hemolytic-uremic syndrome, which can cause kidney failure and even death.

This particular strain of E. coli is unique in that it’s causing neurological issues among victims in what might be the worst outbreak in history.

The German newspaper Der Spiegel quoted Dr. Daniel Wertheimer from the Schön Clinic’s Neurology Center in Hamburg as saying, “We were all looking at the kidney symptoms first. But perhaps enterohemorrhagic E. coli will eventually go down in history as the pathogen that caused serious damage to the central nervous system.”

This variant of E. coli is also unusual because it is antibiotic resistant. Was this particular strain of the common bacteria engineered and then released into the food supply? That is the chilling question some people are asking.

By using fear, writes Mike Adams, the publisher of the Natural News website, those behind the plot could exploit people’s concerns to take “total control over the global food supply and [outlaw] raw sprouts, raw milk and raw vegetables.”

He adds: “This particular E. coli variation is a member of the O104 strain, and O104 strains are almost never (normally) resistant to antibiotics. In order for them to acquire this resistance, they must be repeatedly exposed to antibiotics in order to provide the mutation pressure that nudges them toward complete drug immunity.”

Adams of Natural News continues, “The simple truth is that the world is now facing a new era of global superbug strains of bacteria that can’t be treated with any known pharmaceutical. They can all, of course, be readily killed with colloidal silver, which is exactly why the FDA and world health regulators have viciously attacked colloidal silver companies all these years. They can’t have the public getting its hands on natural antibiotics that really work. That would defeat the whole purpose of making everybody sick in the first place.”

Adams’s colloidal silver claim is supported. International Health cites a patent granted to the manufacturing process of their “Super Silver” product. “The results indicate that the 32 parts per million silver embodiment of this invention shows an effective bactericidal effect for pathogenic E. coli.”

This reporter also sought advice from Chip Bemis, owner of the Water Evolution, LLC, who suggested an E. coli study published by the National Institutes of Health. According to them, E. coli-infected sprouts showed a “91.1 percent and 99.8 percent reduction when treated with electrolyzed oxidizing water.” ★

Congressman May Be Hiding Darker Secret

By Dave Gahary

News that Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-N.Y.) sent several private text messages to a 17-year-old Delaware girl forced the seven-term Democratic congressman to resign on June 16.

Weiner, pegged by the mainstream press as a rising star and an American Israel Public Affairs Committee favorite son, headed for the exits quickly after news of the underage connection surfaced. After a local police investigation of the minor's computer files revealed those messages to be "harmless," some observers are questioning whether a more serious, possibly illegal act was about to be revealed, such as child pornography or pedophilia.

Weiner has close ties to the largest Jewish childcare agency in America, Brooklyn, N.Y.-based Ohel Children's Home and Family Services. Ohel, which receives millions of dollars in federal and state funding, has a sordid history in reporting suspected cases of sexual abuse to American authorities.

The most notorious is that of pedophile Rabbi Avrohom Mondrowitz, who fled to Israel in 1984 and remains there, as U.S. authorities have been unsuccessful in their extradition attempts. Several independent investigations report that Mondrowitz has abused perhaps hundreds of children, both Jewish and Christian. Ohel continued to send children to Mondrowitz, although the boys complained bitterly about abuse.

Sources familiar with the matter feel that Jewish religious law may be foiling American law enforcement from filing similar criminal charges against the center and other suspected individuals. The collective body of Jewish law, Halacha, prohibits mesira—informing the authorities on fellow Jews. In the United States, child sexual abuse is illegal in every state as well as under federal law and requires reporting any reasonable suspicion of abuse to the authorities.

Weiner's relationship with Ohel resulted in the congressman securing an additional $300,000 for the agency in 2010, on top of the millions in taxpayer dollars it receives annually. According to the newspaper The Jewish Star, Ohel's former director "personally contributed $6,240 to Weiner's political campaigns."

Weiner is also a follower of the ultra-Orthodox "rabbi to the stars" Yoshiyahu Yosef Pinto, a "self-proclaimed kabbalah scholar who puts death curses on his critics," according to the New York Daily News.

The daily adds that the rabbi regularly tells his "wealthy, largely Israeli, followers" to host fundraisers for Weiner and support him financially.

Pinto is no stranger to trouble. Pinto's townhouse is facing foreclosure, one of his close associates was outed recently as a wealthy pornographer and a target of one of his curses died after he mysteriously threw himself out of a 19th-story window last June. ★

Courage Under Fire:

Profiles in Bravery from the Battlefields of the Civil War

In Courage Under Fire, historian Wiley Sword captures the fervor of a nation at war with itself. Through diaries and letters written not only on the battlefields and in camps, but also on the deathbeds of soldiers from both North and South, Sword lays bare the complexities of a soldier's mind in coming to grips with life and death—even while his country and his family is ripped apart. Featured in this compelling study of men and women facing the severest stress of their lives are stories such as that of Union Lt. Col. Frank Curtiss. He was ordered to lead his regiment in a hopeless charge against the enemy's fortified lines at Atlanta, Ga. in 1864. Aware that many of his men would die needlessly and for minimal tactical gain, he refused to obey these orders. Confederate Gen. John Bell Hood's decision to sacrifice much of his army in 1864 was one of the saddest events of the war. Lucy Morse kept desperate hope that her husband would survive the fighting. Her story and that of many others provide graphic evidence of the fiber of America's soldiers and their worthy families. Softcover, 318 pages, #CUA, $18.

Starving the South:

How the North Really Won the Civil War

Did they matter, those battlefield encounters, or was the war won via the stomach? A respected historian's new look at how Union blockades brought about the defeat of a starving Confederacy. In April 1861, President Abraham Lincoln ordered a blockade of Southern ports used by the Confederacy for cotton and tobacco exporting as well as for the importation of food. The Confederate army grew thin while Union dinner tables groaned and Northern canning operations kept Union armies strong. In Starving the South, Andrew Smith takes a gastronomical look at the war's outcome and legacy. While the war split the country in a way that still affects race and politics today, it also affected the way we eat. It transformed local markets into nationalized food suppliers; forced the development of a Northern canning industry; established Thanksgiving as a national holiday; and blended a new cuisine from the recipes of freed slaves who migrated north. On the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Fort Sumter, Smith is the first to ask: "Did hunger ultimately defeat the Confederacy?" Hardcover, 295 pages, #STS, $30.

Tick Tock Goes the Debt Clock

Wall Street bankers, financier wants debt ceiling raised

Mainstream news outlets, at the behest of Wall Street, have been howling for weeks that time is running out for Congress to raise the debt ceiling, which allows the U.S. Treasury Department to borrow above the current legal limit of $14.3 trillion, or the country will default on the national debt.

The Treasury Department has set Aug. 2 as the official deadline for raising the debt ceiling. Economists estimate that the government will have to borrow $2.5 trillion—the equivalent of the entire national debt in the 1980s under President Reagan—just to get the government through until the elections in November 2012. If Congress does not take action by that date, say Treasury officials, Washington will not have money to pay the interest on the national debt.

So far, Republicans and fiscally conservative Democrats have stuck to their guns, refusing to raise the debt ceiling so long as liberal legislators rebuff spending cuts.

Should Congress choose not to raise the debt ceiling—a highly unlikely scenario—that does not mean the federal government has to default on its debt. Washington can simply cut mountains of spending programs until it has the money left over to keep paying the bankers their pound of flesh.

Of course, Washington would not have the money to continue its wars in Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Libya, Yemen and eastern Africa. Many thousands of federal workers would likely be furloughed or laid off as the government would not have the dollars to pay all these bureaucrats.

If this were to actually happen, would it be such a bad thing? The average American would love it. ★

Congress Moves to End Subsidies, Tariffs for Ethanol

A quiet battle is raging in Congress over a direct subsidy to petroleum refineries, which receive on average 45 cents from American taxpayers for every gallon of ethanol that the gas companies add to gasoline.

On June 14, The Senate shot down the Ethanol Subsidy and Tariff Repeal Act (S. 1057), which was recently introduced by Sens. Tom Coburn (R-Okla.) and Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.). The measure would have done away with the Volumetric Ethanol Excise Tax Credit (VEETC), which provides subsidies to petroleum companies to encourage them to add ethanol to fuel.

VEETC was passed by a Republican-led Congress in 2004 and signed into law by President George W. Bush as part of the American Jobs Creation Act of 2004.

At face value, Coburn's proposed measure sounds good. But the problem is his bill would also eliminate a 54-cent tariff placed at the water's edge on imported ethanol.

The tariff was originally added to the tax credit by the authors of the original law in order to protect U.S. farmers and shield taxpayers from the cost of the subsidy. Since the United States imports several hundred million gallons of ethanol every year from countries like Brazil, this means the government is collecting several hundred million dollars of revenue that does not come out of taxpayers' pockets.

AMERICAN FREE PRESS is much in favor of ethanol, as has been stated. It has been produced even since before there was an independent United States. Anyone can make ethanol easily. All you need is an ax, some firewood and mash from corn, bamboo, potatoes, sweet potatoes, manioc, wheat, milo, sugar beets, sugar cane, switchgrass, duckweed, aquatic farms, weeds, trees such as poplar, sweet gum, eucalyptus, etc. etc. See the article "Big Oil Baloney," which was published in the May 23, 2011 issue of AFP. ★

Americans: Congress Is Crooked

Poll also shows 70% believe elected officials are doing lousy job

A CLEAR MAJORITY, OR 58 PERCENT, of Americans surveyed recently believe that members of Congress are "unethical," according to a new national poll conducted by Pulse Opinion Research.

The opinion poll came just after news broke that Rep. Anthony Weiner (D-N.Y.) sent multiple provocative photographs of himself over the Internet to women and girls. Last year, the non-practicing Jewish congressman married a Muslim woman, who it was announced earlier in June is pregnant with their first child.

As AFP went to press, Weiner had checked himself into a rehab clinic. Pressure was put on him by senior members of his party to step down, and then he announced his resignation.

In that same poll, 70 percent of the respondents disapprove of the job Congress is doing now. Additionally, 36 percent said they trusted neither major party, compared to 31 percent who back the Democrats and 29 percent who are for the GOP.

In the past few years, a number of high-profile legislators have been tarnished by sexual or financial scandals.

On the House side, the top corrupt legislators include Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham (R-Calif.), who was sent to prison in 2006 for bribery, Rep. Mark Foley (R-Fla.), who resigned in 2006 after it was disclosed he had sent sexually explicit computer messages to teenage male pages, Rep. William Jefferson (D-La.), who went to prison in 2009 for receiving lucrative bribes, Rep. Charles Rangel (D-N.Y.), who was censured in 2010 for major ethics violations, Rep. Tom Delay, who was sent to jail for three years earlier this year for laundering money, and Rep. Christopher Lee (R-N.Y.), who resigned recently after it was revealed the married congressman had been soliciting dates with women on the Internet.

As for the Senate, Sen. Ted Stevens lost a re-election bid after he was convicted on seven counts of bribery and tax evasion in 2008, Sen. Larry Craig (R-Idaho) stepped down in 2009 after he was arrested for trying to solicit an undercover male police officer in an airport bathroom and Sen. John Ensign (R-Nev.) resigned in April 2011 after it was disclosed the family-values senator had been having an affair for years. ★

GLOBALISTS CALL FOR 'BIG WAR'

By James P. Tucker Jr.

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland—The secret globalist group "Bilderberg" called for a big war by expanding the turmoil in Libya into a full-scale conflict involving the entire Middle East except for Israel. This is a grim and bloody outlook, because, historically, every time Bilderberg orders war, the guns begin to shoot. In 1991, President George H.W. Bush followed orders and attacked Iraq in Persian Gulf War I. He lost to peace candidate Bill Clinton, who followed orders and invaded Yugoslavia.

The list is endless: Every war dating back to and including World War II has been ordered by Bilderberg. Although they did not start calling themselves Bilderberg until 1954, Rockefeller and Rothschild cronies had the ear of President Franklin Roosevelt when the White House baited the Japanese into conducting a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor on Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941.

Similarly, President Harry Truman was pressured into going to war in Korea, and then Lyndon Johnson involved the U.S. in Vietnam.

Johnson seemed to enjoy cruelty. The same draft law used in World War II had been revived in 1946, making all able-bodied men aged 18-38 eligible for combat. A

Although a bit hard to make out behind the tinted glass, that's 96-year-old David Rockefeller arriving in his limousine at the Suvretta House, site of the 2011 Bilderberg confab. college student could finish his degree but must then report for duty. As a matter of policy, LBJ said students could finish their entire education, including postgraduate work, before reporting. And no one older than 27 would be drafted. The result: Dick Cheney and others avoided service by remaining in college until the age of 27. So the body bags were mostly filled by young boys with no more than a high school education.

"It will have to be a big war involving several countries to advance our goals of a global economy," said Keith Alexander, director of the U.S. National Security Agency. "But the pressure to end the war in Libya is non-stop, mostly because of that damn Kucinich." He was referring to Rep. Dennis Kucinich (D-Ohio), whose bill to end the invasion of Libya was defeated just before Congress adjourned for a week on June 3.

"But look at all the votes [148] he got," Alexander said. "This is dangerous. Congress may cut or even eliminate war funding, and our soldiers are not even fighting."

Bilderberg's goal of expanding the turmoil surrounding the invasion of Libya into a huge bloodletting in the Mideast will be helped, they say, by their plan to maintain the global recession through 2012.

"The recession may keep coverage [of Bilderberg] down," said John Kerr, a member of the British House of Lords and deputy chairman of Royal Dutch Shell. "Europe has many independent papers, but they go low-budget. We have made calls to Rupert Murdoch, still our good friend,” he said of the world’s largest owner of newspapers.

Kerr and the others were to be bitterly disappointed when confronted by angry crowds as their helicopters landed at the resort on Thursday, June 9. Most had planned to arrive Wednesday afternoon, after leaving their “cover meeting” of NATO countries in Brussels, Belgium. But frequent, heavy rains kept the copters grounded. Bilderberg traditionally has a “cover meeting” so, for example, outgoing Defense Secretary Robert Gates can attend a NATO session and slip, unnoticed, into the Bilderberg meeting. Gates addressed Bilderberg on Friday, June 10.

Gates had said the same things to the NATO crowd he later said at Bilderberg, calling for more aerial combat actions by allies even as the United States confines itself to a backup role. Gates called for more effort by the Netherlands, Spain and Turkey and urged Germany and Poland to join the war.

Gates’s hour-long speech at Bilderberg was mentioned by The Financial Times. His audience, however, was described only as a “gathering of dignitaries.”

He said the European NATO members face “the very real possibility of collective military irrelevance” as a superpower unless they contribute more money and troops.

Washington has frequently requested, “with exasperation,” that European NATO countries meet the alliance’s benchmarks for defense spending, Gates said and called the situation in the current campaign in Libya “unacceptable.” He said “the blunt reality is there will be dwindling appetite and patience in the U.S. Congress—and in the American body politic—to expend increasingly precious funds on behalf of nations that are apparently unwilling to devote the necessary resources to make the necessary changes to be serious and capable partners in their own defense.”

NATO has degenerated into a “two-tiered” alliance with the United States and a small group of European allies doing the tough jobs while others benefit from NATO’s protection without bearing a fair share of costs and risks, Gates said. “This is no longer a hypothetical worry,” Gates said in one of the harshest speeches ever delivered at Bilderberg.

When Bill Clinton, a Bilderberg attendee, was president, NATO became the UN’s standing army, operating anywhere in the world on the orders of the Security Council. Under the UN, NATO invaded Yugoslavia. Under its charter, NATO is a defensive army only. But the first weapon fired in anger was an offensive war under direction of the UN.

Bilderberg has forgiven Barack Obama for hesitancy about what is now “his war.” They understand the political delicacy in Washington but, as one said, “he’s a good soldier and he’ll follow orders.”

Obama was praised for doing Bilderberg errands on his visit to a summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Hawaii. A major Bilderberg goal of establishing a world government is to create an Asian-Pacific Union following an American Union, both patterned after the European Union superstate.

Even as Bilderberg gathered, OPEC nations were following orders to keep oil prices pumped up to assist the goal of raising U.S. prices to $7 a gallon. While making clucking sounds about holding down prices, OPEC allowed a slight, momentary dip as a public relations gesture. But Saudi Arabia maintains 3 million barrels a day of spare capacity. This did not fool Frank Verrastro, director of the energy program at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, which is traditionally a Bilderberg collaborator.

“I think there’s going to be a lot of theatrics, but beyond that I don’t think it affects the outcome,” Verrastro said. “If OPEC becomes less cohesive, that means each country goes its own way on production.”

“All these countries need money,” said Fadel Ghatt, oil analyst at Oppenheimer & Co. “They will produce as much as they can get away with without destroying demand.”

MARK ANDERSON REPORTS ...

HAPPY BIRTHDAY MR. ROCKEFELLER: Several spirited demonstrations took place with hundreds of young protesters doing their best to draw attention to the secret 2011 Bilderberg gathering. A group of 125 activists and journalists—several of them toting lit torches—marched down the hill from a rally they held and sang Happy Birthday to You to David Rockefeller, who turned 96 on June 12, just after midnight at Suvretta House, the luxury resort which hosted this year’s meeting. AFP’s Jim Tucker said that this was the first time in his 35 years of covering Bilderberg that concerned citizens had done anything like this. Above, a photo by “Christian” from

BAETTIG REBUFFED: During one anti-Bilderberg rally, gutsy Swiss national legislator Dominique Baettig (shown above, left, in the rain reporting on Bilderberg security denying his request to enter the meeting) wanted to confront the attendees, which included the Swiss president, Swiss officials and businessmen. (See page 11.) Baettig’s ultimate desire was to have Henry Kissinger arrested on war crimes charges. Kissinger was on the official attendee list, but his presence was not confirmed.

SCURRYING OUT OF TOWN: Bilderberg group attendees departed their 2011 meeting earlier than ever before in their nearly 60-year history and many believe it was due to the heavy press coverage. This year’s coverage was on Swiss national television and on Russia Today, a worldwide internet and TV news broadcast, and was reported through various German-speaking and French-speaking newspapers and through a blitz of independent online videos and articles by AFP and others. This year’s Swiss coverage changed from being highly skeptical of Bilderberg’s critics as the 2011 Bilderberg conference was getting started, to being more balanced and inquisitive of what Bilderberg is about as the conference proceeded. As of 2:20 p.m. local time on Sunday, June 12, Swiss police, without warning, began taking down the nearby barricades (above), to return the road that leads to Suvretta House back to normal. ★ issues of Greek sovereign debt to replace maturing bonds if all creditors do the same. The move could provide a way forward for involving private creditors in a Greek rescue program. But it falls short of a German demand for them to agree voluntarily on an extension of bond maturities. The French proposal echoes the thinking of the European Central Bank, which claims that a rollover of Greek debt, rather than a "reprofiling" with extended maturities, would be a good way for private creditors to be involved in a new deal. French banks are among Greece's largest creditors.

But the German government reaffirmed its determination to persuade bondholders to contribute more to a rescue. They called for a seven-year voluntary extension of maturities.

Jean-Claude Trichet, president of the European Central Bank, told fellow Bilderbergers that Europe needs a "Eurozone treasury secretary" with independent authority over all EU banks to avoid further crises like those of Greece, Ireland, Portugal and Spain. There is no time, when a crisis erupts, for the nations to come to a voluntary agreement, he said, because such a treasury department would have to act swiftly and with authority to impose bailout actions.

There was modest attention to China and Japan, relative newcomers to Bilderberg. In response to the explosions in Japan's nuclear power plants, there was talk of imposing global rules on safety inspections. On China, there was talk of enjoying huge profits by bringing materials from slave-wage countries in Africa to be made into finished products by Chinese labor (itself relatively cheap). The finished product would be sold in the United States, where unemployment rates unofficially exceed 15 percent.

Craig Mundi, a Microsoft executive, complained about China establishing rules that favor building electronic gadgets at home and selling them without foreign competition. Another who Bilderberg tried to hide by keeping his name off its "official list" was Bill Gates, a self-made billionaire computer nerd who founded Microsoft. ★

Independent Media From Across Globe Follow AFP's Lead

AFP's team was part of the first-ever organized Bilderberg news center. It occupied a large room inside Hotel San Gian. Because of this center in St. Moritz—organized by Manfred "Freeman" Petritsch representing the German website AllesSchallUndRauch.de—Swiss and other foreign media knew where to go, besides outside the Bilderberg meeting itself, to get quotes and gather information. Switzerland's national television news outlet stopped by the center, as did the worldwide Russia Today. Radio host Alex Jones (Infowars.com) also helped spread the word with interviews with AFP's Jim Tucker and others. ★

Uninvited Politicians Fail to Crash Bilderberg Meeting

By Mark Anderson

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland—Anti-Bilderberg rally attendees gathered on the evenings of June 10 and 11 at the quaint Hotel Randolins above the Bilderberg group's meeting place—in order to hear three national lawmakers and others speak about Bilderberg, and about Switzerland's attempts to retain its sovereignty and cultural/national identity.

The June 10 rally featured Swiss National Council member Dominique Baettig, who became internationally known for writing letters to two top Swiss law enforcement officials, asking that Bilderberg not be allowed to convene in Switzerland (AFP, June 6, 2011).

It turned out that his requests were unsuccessful, but he earned plenty of plaudits for his tenacity. So, Baettig led a group of 40 activists on foot to the Suvretta House hotel around 11:15 p.m. to request admission into the Bilderberg meeting. As a respected Swiss lawmaker, he wanted to know what the attendees were discussing.

But while Swiss President Doris Leuthard was inside among the Bilderbergers with other select Swiss nationals, Baettig—a member of his nation's largest political party, the Swiss People's Party (SVP)—was denied entry after police called and asked if he could enter.

"I just want to see what they are talking about, and maybe have a drink at the bar," Baettig remarked, just before he approached security to request admission.

Notably, another legislator tried to enter. Mario

Borghesio, an Italian representative in the European Parliament, reportedly was roughed up and arrested by Bilderberg security upon trying to enter Suvretta House on June 9. In a phone call with AFP, Swiss police admitted Borghesio's arrival, and confirmed he had been detained, questioned and released.

After he was denied entry into the Bilderberg meeting, Baettig noted: "We tried [to enter] . . . it's a sorry state for this country."

Switzerland plays a key role, due to its proud traditions of neutrality and peace, to stop the full consummation of the European Union.

A resolute guy with a gentle persona, Baettig intended to inquire on whether longtime Bilderberger and former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was in town and, if he was, press forward with convincing Swiss police to arrest Kissinger and have him extradited to Spain to face war-crimes charges.

Baettig was joined at the June 10 rally by two fellow SVP legislators, Lucas Reimann and Pirmin Schwander. They both rapped Bilderberg and spoke for Swiss sovereignty, but some wondered why they did not accompany Baettig to Suvretta House despite ample opportunity to do so. Several rally attendees agreed that three legislators would have presented a united front, making Baettig's Bilderberg-entry request harder to deny.

Had Baettig been allowed in, that would have been a first in Bilderberg's history.

Reimann did say on the radio show hosted by Alex Jones, as confirmed later by AFP in a chat with Schwander, that Swiss legislation exists to get Switzerland out of the International Monetary Fund.

Meanwhile, there have been allegations that longtime SVP member Christoph Blocher has rubbed elbows with Bilderberg and might not uphold SVP's resistance to Swiss incorporation into the EU.

Two Swiss activists familiar with their nation's affairs told the AFP team upon its arrival in Zurich that there was a lack of confidence in young Toni Brunner, another prominent SVP member who, they fear, might succumb to pressure to surrender Swiss traditions.

Speaking before a rally on June 11, this AFP writer stressed to the enthusiastic attendees that Switzerland plays a key role, due to its central location and proud traditions of neutrality and peace, to stop the full consummation of the European Union.

A copy of AFP's Bilderberg Files, a booklet of news clips, correspondence and other materials detailing Bilderberg back to its founding in 1954, was circulated to politicians and activists to show the history of this globalist gathering. (See page 12 for more.) ★

1975: Bilderberg Unearthed

By Willis A. Carto

A group of freedom-loving Rhodesians had invited me to Salisbury, Rhodesia's lovely, clean, civilized white-ruled capital to speak. Liberty Lobby had set up under my guidance a "Friends of Rhodesia Independence." I accepted the invitation, looking forward to the trip there and also to spying on the secret Bilderberg meeting scheduled for Cesme, Turkey April 25-27, 1975. My helpmate and wife, Elisabeth, accompanied me.

The subject of my talk, I remember, was the duplicity of politicians, and I warned those in attendance never to trust them. At the time I was specifically thinking of Rhodesia's prime minister, Ian Smith, who promptly, under the sway of Britain and our own Henry Kissinger, proved his duplicity by returning control to Britain. Collecting his dues, he then retired to a mansion in Rhodesia, where he lived out his miserable life in a country which returned to the black-ruled poverty and corruption from which it had sprung. Zimbabwe is now its name.

Continuing our trip, we flew to Athens, then in the middle of riots to oust the military officers then ruling Greece, and we were teargassed along with another couple of thousand demonstrators. From Athens, we flew to Izmir (the old Smyrna), Turkey and registered at the Golden Dolphin Hotel, in Cesme. We had chosen this luxurious spot because we knew that the Bilderbergers were going to meet there. Making the most of the time we had, we befriended hotel workers, telling them of the sinister meeting planned there of which they knew nothing, asking them to pick up any leftover notes, letters and such for us, which they did.

As an aside, Elisabeth spied the name of William F. Buckley Jr. on a list of Bilderberg participants at the front desk when she wanted an answer to why we were asked to vacate the hotel suddenly. The desk clerk had turned away for a minute and left the list exposed right under her eyes. Most readers will recognize Buckley as a speaker, publicist and popular TV guest who was the spokesman for "respectable conservatives."

On April 24, all guests were evicted from the hotel and told they could return on the 28th as there was a conference to be held of world leaders to discuss matters of major importance to the universe. Properly impressed, all guests vacated. A tight cordon was set up around the hotel area comprised not only of hotel security but local gendarmes and a unit of the Turkish army.

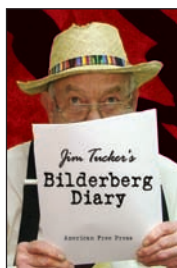

Over the next three days all telephone connections to Europe and the U.S. were down; it was impossible to make calls out of the area. On the morning of April 28 the guards were gone, the hotel was emptied during the night and we could make calls again.

Jim Tucker's Bilderberg Diary

One Man's Battle to Expose the Shadow Government

In existence for more than 50 years, acting as a virtual global ruling elite, Bilderberg's very name and activities remain largely hidden in the shadows, despite its immense clout in directing the course of world affairs. Now with the release of Bilderberg Diary by veteran journalist James P. Tucker Jr., those who've never known of Bilderberg will get a first-hand account of its history from the one journalist who has tailed the Bilderbergers for the last 30 years. Although the mass media in the doggedly suppressed news and information about Bilderberg, Tucker has established himself as the world's foremost authority, reporting on Bilderberg group intrigues in the pages of AMERICAN FREE PRESS. In Bilderberg Diary Jim Tucker lays out his entire remarkable history of infiltrating Bilderberg meetings, procuring their private documents, and working relentlessly to shine the spotlight of public scrutiny on Bilderberg's shadowy affairs. The Bilderberg Files

Rare research material on Bilderberg from the 1970s

THE BILDERBERG FILES is a special assembly of rare research material and early reports on Bilderberg that provides readers with a wealth of confidential Bilderberg documents that prove that this secretive globalist group is operating behind the scenes despite denials to the contrary. These files originally came into the hands of Willis Carto, the founder of the Washington-based populist institution LIBERTY LOBBY, after he traveled to Turkey a quarter century ago to report on the shadowy organization. At the time, the name Bilderberg was a carefully guarded secret of the global elites. But after three decades of tireless work on the part of Carto and AMERICAN FREE PRESS editor Jim Tucker, millions of people around the world are now aware of the Bilderberg group and its goal of creating a world government for the benefit of the plutocracy. Stock Up on Edison Light Bulbs While You Can

New LED bulbs are so potentially dangerous, expensive Americans should protest mandatory use

By Ralph Forbes

Cut down on energy usage, save the planet—and slash your electric bill. What could be better? It seemed better than Girl Scout cookies—until the facts were checked. As usual, when the government promises to save you money and make your life better, hold on to your wallets, and hide your wife and children.

The feds mandate that Edison's tried and true light bulbs will be forbidden after January 2012. The new 100-watt light-emitting diodes (LEDs) will be scarce—and will cost about $50 each.

This summer you should be able to get 75-watt LED-equivalent from big-box hardware stores for about $45. Right now you can buy a Philips 60-watt-equivalent bulb for around $40—but it's slightly dimmer than a 60-watt incandescent bulb. Sylvania sells a similar LED bulb at hardware stores, also for $40.

But LEDs "last forever," so in the long run it's worth it, right? Well, the little red LED that lets you know an appliance is on or is in your clock radio, probably will last indefinitely, but it doesn't provide much light.

The problem with LEDs is that although they don't produce as much heat as incandescent bulbs, the heat they do generate reduces their efficiency—and shortens the lifespan of the LEDs.

One solution by Philips uses "remote phosphors" to achieve greater efficiency, but it is not known what the spectrum is, visible or invisible, or what the effect is on comfort or health. Another idea is tiny fans to dissipate the heat. However, this uses more energy, causing light to flicker. There are a number of companies working on technical solutions, but none has solved all the problems with LEDs.

In a new University of California, Irvine study, it has been revealed that LED lightbulbs advertised as "green" or "eco-friendly" are actually laden with arsenic, lead and other hazardous chemicals.

Other technologies have even bigger problems. Organic light-emitting diodes are glowing sheets instead of pinprick light sources like more traditional LEDs. So far, they are an expensive novelty used in some smartphones.

Compact fluorescent lights contain the neurotoxin mercury vapor, which is released if they break or are improperly thrown away. According to the European Commission Scientific Committee on Emerging and Newly Identified Health Risks, these pose an added health risk due to the ultraviolet and blue light emitted by such devices. The European commission also stated that more research is needed to establish whether compact fluorescent lamps constitute any higher risk from ultra-violet and blue rays.

If individuals are exposed to the light produced by some single-envelope compact fluorescent lamps for long periods of time at distances of less than 10 inches, it could lead to ultraviolet exposures approaching the current workplace limit set to protect workers from skin rashes, cancer and retinal damage.

MERCURY POISONING

In the past decade, hundreds of Chinese factory workers who manufacture compact fluorescent lights, or CFLs, for export to first world countries were being poisoned and hospitalized because of mercury exposure. Examples include workers at the Nanhai Feiyang lighting factory in Foshan, where 68 out of 72 were so badly poisoned that they required hospitalization. At another CFL factory in Jinzhou, 121 out of 123 employees were found to have excessive mercury levels, with one employee's mercury level 150 times the accepted standard, according to published reports.

Scientists in Germany have claimed that energy-saving bulbs should not be left on for long periods of time or placed close to a person's head because they release poisonous materials. They should not be used by adults to read or kept near a child's head all night.

The harmful substances include phenol, a deadly poison, as well as the toxins naphthalene and styrene, say the researchers. Tests showed that the materials used to make the lamps are probably responsible for their potentially harmful side effects.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimated that when all 270 million compact fluorescent lamps sold in 2007 alone are sent to landfill sites, this would represent around 0.13 metric tons of mercury. ★

The Truth Behind 'Chemtrails'

The issue the mainstream is avoiding ...
Informative DVD may hold some answers ...

What is really going on in the not-so-friendly skies? There is an unusual phenomenon occurring in the skies above America—and around the world—that is being dismissed by the mainstream media as a “conspiracy theory.” People across America are noticing planes crossing back and forth in the sky, leaving in their wake a trail of “vapor” that does not evaporate. These mysterious, unmarked planes leave smoke-like trails behind them that spread until the skies have become overcast. Officials from the EPA and the U.S. Air Force will not respond to questions regarding this phenomenon. This film takes you into the possible reasons and adverse reactions to what is seemingly a massive, possibly top-secret, worldwide program of chemical spraying. Secret History of the War on Cancer

Why has the “war on cancer” languished? Why is the mainstream focusing mainly on finding and treating the disease and downplaying the need to control and combat cancer’s basic causes—tobacco, workplace toxins, radiation and the general toxicity of the environment? This war has targeted the wrong enemies with the wrong weapons, failing to address well-known cancer causes. As epidemiologist Devra Davis shows in this superbly researched exposé, this is no accident. The “war on cancer” has followed the commercial interests of industries that generated a host of cancer-causing materials and products. This is the gripping story of a major public health effort diverted and distorted for private gain that is being reclaimed through efforts for a more “green” healthcare and environment. Softcover, 529 pages, #SWC, $21. Order from FIRST AMENDMENT BOOKS, 645 Pennsylvania Avenue SE, #100, Washington, D.C. 20003. FDA: Failure, Deception, Abuse

The Story of an Out-of-Control Agency

FDA: Failure, Deception, Abuse consists of FDA exposé articles William Faloon and others have written over the past 14 years. The book represents a compilation of FDA atrocities that have never appeared together in one publication. The book explains why there is an urgent need for radical FDA reform. Armed with the unassailable data provided in FDA: Failure, Deception, Abuse, the groundwork has been laid for citizens to rise up against FDA oppressors and demand Congress enact radical FDA reform, including allowing Americans to access any therapy they believe may improve their lives (as long as fraud is not involved). If radical FDA reform is not enacted, most people reading this ad will suffer premature aging and death. Hardcover, 498 pages, #FDA, $22. 'American Exceptionalism' Just More NWO Rhetoric

By Michael Collins Piper

During the 2012 election campaign, you'll probably be hearing a lot about "American exceptionalism," particularly from the Republican presidential candidates.

Newt Gingrich has made the concept a centerpiece of his campaign, and Gingrich's wife—the current one, that is—has produced a documentary on the topic. Mitt Romney's campaign book is entitled No Apology: The Case for American Greatness. Sarah Palin's book, America by Heart, has a chapter entitled "America the Exceptional." And former Sen. Rick Santorum and Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty have also been heard touting the topic.

But don't be fooled by rhetoric that has a lot of patriotic appeal. In fact, the concept of American exceptionalism—and a related theme known as national greatness conservatism—are really modern-day propaganda masks for old-fashioned Trotskyite communism: rapacious imperialism and internationalism now wrapped in the American flag, but no different from the age-old dream of a world imperium—a global government. Many call it the New World Order.

The wizards who conjured up these themes are three key figures in the so-called neo-conservative movement:

- William Kristol, founding editor of The Weekly Standard, long published by Zionist billionaire Rupert Murdoch;
- David Brooks, a former Kristol underling at the Standard and now a columnist for The New York Times, and;
- Marshall Wittmann, a Jewish Trotskyite-turned neo-conservative and regular Standard contributor.

Kristol and Brooks began their crusade for national greatness conservatism with a Sept. 15, 1997 Wall Street Journal article that urged Americans to "reinvig-

Pundit and political operative Marshall Wittmann has invoked the name of Teddy Roosevelt as an example of "national greatness conservatism." Roosevelt, despite his good points, was in fact an ardent internationalist.

DAVID BROOKS

orate the nationalism of Alexander Hamilton, Henry Clay and Teddy Roosevelt."

And during the 2000 presidential campaign, Wittmann chimed in with a lengthy piece in the Standard promoting John McCain, hailing McCain as a tribune of national greatness conservatism and as a modern-day Theodore Roosevelt.

Although many remember the first President Roosevelt as a symbol of American greatness, the ugly truth that the controlled media ignores is that it was "TR" who—even before Woodrow Wilson—began calling upon the American people to sacrifice their lives and treasure in the cause of global conquest, ostensibly in the name of bringing peace to the planet.

This is not nationalism. It is internationalism, advancing the theme that the United States should act as a world policeman promoting some undefined dream of democracy, which has now become the rallying cry of the modern Zionist-Trotskyite schemers.

So TR was an internationalist, and no true American nationalist should look to TR as a model of American greatness. Yet, TR's spirit is said to underlie national greatness conservatism and American exceptionalism.

More recently, in the Nov. 12, 2010 issue of The New York Times, the aforementioned Brooks—sounding the call for a new centrist movement in American politics—claimed that a national greatness agenda would be promoted by "the next big social movement."

Brooks said this national greatness agenda would reject the views of "orthodox liberals and conservatives" and end "hyper-partisanship." He added that "the coming movement may be a third party or it may support serious people in the existing two" and preserve American supremacy—that is, global interventionism.

And don't think it was—as the media has suggested—just a reckless misstep by Newt Gingrich when he criticized the Medicare reform package of Rep. Paul Ryan (R-Wis.) saying, "I don't think right-wing social engineering is any more desirable than left-wing social engineering. I don't think imposing radical change from the right or the left is a very good way for a free society to operate."

The truth is that Gingrich's rhetoric—attacking both the right and the left in the same breath—was deliberate. He was clearly portraying himself as one of the centrist advocates of American exceptionalism, echoed by other recent comments by Gingrich proudly recalling his many years as a Rockefeller Republican.

Don't be surprised—you heard it here first—that if he fails to win the GOP presidential nomination, Gingrich will be part of a breakaway centrist third party movement which has been conjured up at the highest levels of the establishment elite. AFP—alone among the media—has been reporting on this phenomenon.

Another disciple of American exceptionalism, Yale Professor David Gelernter—another Weekly Standard figure—has promoted the idea that Americanism is a modern-day incarnation of Biblical Zionism and that Americans have "a divine mission to all mankind" and that "every human being everywhere is entitled to freedom, equality and democracy."

In a book grandly entitled Americanism: The Fourth Great Western Religion, Gelernter expressed the contention that the United States (the base of what he has called American Zionism) is now charged with an imperial, even God-given, duty to remake the world, that Americanism is the creed of this global agenda, that this "Fourth Great Western Religion" is the driving force behind—and which must establish—a new planet-wide regime. He wrote:

We are the one and only biggest boy [in the world today]. If there is to be justice in the world, America must create it. . . . We must pursue justice, help the suffering and overthrow tyrants. We must spread the creed.

This is the New World Order. And this is the underlying theme of national greatness conservatism and American exceptionalism. But there is nothing American about it. So don't be fooled by what sounds like patriotic rhetoric from the Republicans. It isn't. ★

"We must pursue justice, help the suffering and overthrow tyrants. We must spread the creed."

AFP's Peter Papaherakles and an attendee of the Conspiracy Conference in Santa Clara, Calif. look at a headline from a recent issue of AFP. If you know of any conferences where you think AFP should be present, please call Pete at 202-544-5977.

AFP Attends Big Conspiracy Confab

By Pete Papaherakles

Hundreds of truth seekers and conspiracy buffs gathered at the Santa Clara Marriott in northern California on the weekend of June 4-5 to attend Conspiracy Con 2011, an event held annually for the past 11 years. AMERICAN FREE PRESS was there to cover the conference that was produced and hosted by Brian Hall, an activist in the San Francisco Bay area for almost 20 years.

Hall brought together over a dozen speakers and a score of exhibitors ranging from psychic readers and alternative media vendors to homeopathic healers. The speakers included Prof. Steven Jones, Montauk Project survivor Stewart Sverdlow—whose great uncle supposedly had the czar and his family killed—plus moviemakers Jose Escamilla and Anthony Hilder. Also present were ex-Illuminist Doc Marquis, author Len Horowitz, Sofia Smallstorm, Lauren Moret, Barbara Honegger, Douglas Dietrich and others.

The subjects they covered ranged from relatively believable conspiracies to completely mind-blowing sci-fi scenarios. Some of the more benign topics included issues that AFP readers are accustomed to such as 9-11 research, media manipulation and brainwashing, domination of the medical industry by big pharma, chemtrails, HAARP and fluoridation of our water. The more outlandish subjects challenge one's sense of reality and pose the question: How much truth can a person handle? Or is it truth?

Talk of population control, the mainstream media's scripted reality and more make the uninitiated recoil with disbelief.

Although the convenient response is to dismiss this information as crazy talk, much of it does seem plausible, if not probable.

For instance, during the closing event on Sunday evening, a discussion panel debated many of the subjects discussed over the weekend, while the audience got a chance to ask questions.

On the subject of 9-11, while everyone agreed on the obviousness of the buildings coming down due to demolition rather than jet fuel from the airplanes, and the certainty that it was not an al Qaeda job, the entire debate focused on how the job was done, with some attention to why it was done. No attention was placed on who did it, even though massive evidence on this has been amassed for several years. Victor Thorn's brilliant book 9-11 Evil makes it clear that Israel played a central role in the operation from beginning to end. Larry Silverstein, Paul Wolfowitz, Richard Pearle, Dov Zakheim, Michael Chertoff, the "Dancing Israelis," 200 "Israeli art students" and all the other players involved revolve around Israeli interests. If one truly seeks the truth, these facts cannot be avoided.

Convention organizer Brian Hall deserves much praise. His conference was a success with fascinating speakers and mind-expanding subjects. Putting it all into perspective, though, is a long-term project. ★

New Book from Marvin Clark

Son of Liberty: No Apology!

Attorney Marvin Clark wanted to know why American society is in a free-fall. So he teamed up with his retired college professor, the late Sarkis Atamian, and the two launched a 15-year research project. Their work was based upon hundreds of volumes from England, Germany, Russia and Ukraine, the Mideast, China, Southeast Asia, South America, Africa, Canada and the United States. The result is a 761-page book, entitled, Son of Liberty: No Apology!

Clark begins by explaining the historical prologue that caused elite bankers to despise American freedoms and put Christendom into conflict with atheists and Jewish Sabbatian occultists. Clark explains the origins of this terrorist cult that has affected world history for more than two centuries. Clark goes on to explain how the Sabbitians became middle-men for the American bankers with a mission to subvert and destroy Christian culture. There is a detailed history of the Frankfurt Institute of Social Research, which was comprised entirely of Sabbatian revolutionaries, the goal of which was and is the deconstruction of American Christian society and the total demise of U.S. economic might. Clark includes and explains the ideological matrix that the "Frankfurt School" blended to create its witches brew, now known as "Critical Theory." He also describes how the Frankfurt School functioned underground in America for three decades, while quietly undermining American culture.

Finally, Clark explains how and why WWI was used to set the stage for all of the wars and conflicts that have persisted until today, and which now are being used by the bankers for eradicating American freedoms. And much, much more . . .

Deafening Message of 29 Standing Ovations Is Clear

By Jim Traficant

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was given 29 standing ovations by an adoring joint session of our U.S. Congress on May 24. U.S. presidents don't ever get that many, folks.

Netanyahu told our cheering Congress that he and Israel are willing to make "painful compromises" for peace with the Palestinian people.

All the talk and pledges of compromise and peace sounded great to America's legislators. The problem with all the pomp and ceremony is that Netanyahu said very little about specifics or details, which might be of interest to a very suspicious Palestinian nation.

But Netanyahu appeared to have a different purpose than just talking about peace.

He was hoping to demonstrate that he still has tremendous support in the U.S. Congress. But that was not the only reason Netanyahu spoke before Congress. The Israeli leader wanted to show President Obama that Congress is totally in support of him, Israel and all of the actions of Israel.

Obama and Netanyahu had some disagreement over Obama's directive that Israel will have to relinquish land to the Palestinians. But the Israelis do not want to do that, and they had growing concerns that Obama may have enough support in Washington for his proposals.

The truth is, the Israelis did not want Obama to get elected. They wanted Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-N.Y.). The power structure in America was solidly behind Hillary. Very few political analysts believed, at the time, that Obama could win, in the early days of his campaign.

I believe the powers that be oiled the skids to elect Mrs. Clinton by keeping both Al Gore and John Kerry out of the race. Gore could have won the primary. Therefore, he had to be kept out, and he was. Most insiders believed Mrs. Clinton was home free after that.

Nobody, I mean nobody, believed that Mrs. Clinton could be beaten by a junior black senator from Chicago. And so go the best laid schemes of mice and men. Obama defeated Mrs. Clinton decisively. Obama then dispatched Sen. John McCain, the Republican nominee, in a landslide.

Israel knew Obama would press for conditions in the Middle East, such as land and settlement compromises, and now it has happened.

That is what is really behind Netanyahu's speech before Congress. Netanyahu was signaling that Israel has so much support in Congress that Obama better think twice before pressing too hard for concessions that Israel does not want, nor will even entertain.

Netanyahu told Congress that Israel would insist on holding major settlement blocks and all of Jerusalem. Netanyahu was also clear on another key issue: Israel will never agree to repatriate millions of Palestinians who were driven out of their homes during the early days of the Jewish nation's creation in 1948.

Palestinian leaders were not taken in by Netanyahu's talk of compromise. In fact, most of their leaders believe it is a continuing declaration of war by Israel against the Palestinian people. Many of those leaders also believe Uncle Sam will continue to cast a blind eye to any actions taken by Israel, as evidenced by 29 deafening, standing ovations.

In essence, issues of Israeli borders, Jerusalem and the fate of Palestinian refugees were laid to rest by those 29 standing ovations.

The Palestinian people must have a homeland, and peace will never happen in the Mideast so long as the U.S. maintains its one-sided policy of support for Israel.

It's time for America to support a homeland for the Palestinians with fair borders, fairness in the issue of Jerusalem and some agreement for relief of Palestinian refugees.

When true compromise is achieved, then Congress should give standing ovations.

George Washington advised that we avoid permanent entanglements with foreign nations. We sure did not heed his sound wisdom.

Don't forget the words of former Israeli premier, Ariel Sharon on Oct. 3, 2001. "We, the Jewish people, control America, and the Americans know it."

Obama better be very careful. After all, having Israel as an enemy is a sign of ultimate political defeat. Israel will continue to operate as usual, because Congress will ensure it. Get back at me! ★

THE RYAN REPORT WITH VINCE RYAN

Is Now the Time to End Nuclear Power in the U.S.?

By Vince Ryan

It has been three months since a powerful tsunami and earthquakes destroyed the Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant in Japan. The release of radioactive material is far worse than thought.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel's government now says it will shut down all 17 nuclear power plants in Germany—the world's fourth-largest economy and Europe's biggest—by 2021. Germany's seven oldest reactors have been taken off the grid pending safety inspections since the Japanese catastrophe.

Switzerland, where nuclear power produces 40 percent of electricity, has announced plans to shut down its reactors once they reach their average lifespan of 50 years—which would mean taking the last plant off the grid in 2034.

Today there are 104 nuclear power plants operating in the United States. They differ from more conventional power plants in that they don't burn anything and don't produce carbon-dioxide emissions. But their operation is based on radioactive materials that produce dangerous radioactive waste—causing a serious problem. Some 77,000 metric tons of radioactive waste have been produced by the nation's 104 nuclear power stations as well as about a dozen more nuclear plants that have been retired.

President Barack Obama and Secretary of Energy Steven Chu believe the material can be safely stored for decades above ground in casks at the nuclear plants where it is produced. But this could soon become too overwhelming for the safety of the communities involved. Do you really want tons of deadly nuclear waste being stored near your home?

Edwin Lyman, senior staff scientist at the Union of Concerned Scientists in Washington, D.C., and past president of the Nuclear Control Institute, believes, "Nuclear plants are intrinsically vulnerable to terrorist attacks because they are delicate systems that can easily be disrupted through violent means. At some U.S. plants, detonation of an explosive device at a single location could be sufficient to result in a core meltdown."

The role played by nature should also be considered. Consider the number of faults on the West Coast that could have the same consequences as in Japan, and the major fault running down the Mississippi River that is tending to divide the United States in two.

Many wonder if the United States could be susceptible to a Chernobyl- or Japanese-type accident.

Lyman says: "The short answer is yes. An accident resulting in a large radiological release to the environment comparable to or worse than that of Chernobyl could definitely occur at a U.S. power plant."

The Three Mile Island nuclear generating station, a civilian nuclear power plant in the Susquehanna River, south of Harrisburg, Pa., has two separate units, which have been plagued with radioactive leaks and technical problems since they first came online in the 1970s. Reactor number two was so badly damaged that it has been permanently shut down.

Recently, the Browns Ferry nuclear plant in Alabama was shut down during the tornado storm last May, due to a stuck valve in its back-up system.

In the April 18 edition of AMERICAN FREE PRESS, Keith Hansen reported on concerns about the New Madrid Seismic Zone in Missouri where some 20 nuclear plants are situated in moderate- to high-earthquake zones, a highly troubling proposition to the millions of people who call this part of the country home.

The evidence is clear that nuclear reactor plants are a danger. Both common sense and history show us that the time is now to put the safety of the people first. ★

Victims of Feds Get Day in Court

Thank you for printing Frank Whalen's article "More Victims of Experiments Go to Bioethics Panel" [in the June 6 edition on page 15]. Whalen's article was accurate. I know because I was there. Please continue to cover the issue of weapons testing and neuroscience experimentation. The majority of people in this country cannot imagine what's going on right under their noses. Americans tortured in their own homes: I never thought I would live to see the day something like this could happen. Incidentally, I've been passing out AFP at the farmers' market, in nursing homes and in local stores. Keep up the fight.

LIBERTY BOOK SO IMPORTANT

That book you guys [AFP] are selling on the attack on the USS Liberty [What I Saw That Day] is just amazing. Phil Tournay and Mark Glenn really let 'em have it—no holds barred. It is, without a doubt, the best book ever printed on the Liberty travesty. I thought I knew everything there was to know about the Liberty attack, but this book has so much more! Tournay should have gotten the Congressional Medal of Honor.

HOPE DEFERRED

Hope springs eternal, said Shakespeare, but in the land of the free hope is eternally deferred.

Take the latest blasted hope. After Osama bin Laden—or someone like him—was murdered instead of captured and put on trial, we naturally assumed that we could declare victory in the "war of terror" (oops—war on terror) and bring our troops home.

We could put the blasted Pentagon on a starvation diet and use the trillions wasted on those criminal wars to repair infrastructure, build high-speed rail lines and fund Social Security and Medicare far into the future.

But they've already found a new bogeyman for us to hate and be taxed to destroy, and that is Osama's second-in-command, Ayman al-Zawahiri. So the war by terror will go on forever, if our real rulers, the military-industrial-banking complex, get their way.

They'll never give us peace, and why? Because they'll lose their jobs. It's as simple as that.

WHAT PRICE EDUCATION?

Early in my 16 years of education, the teachers told us we owed the national debt to ourselves. At the University of California Berkeley, I was subjected to Keynesian "economics," which I easily saw through in the first weeks of my freshman year. The teaching assistant could not explain the workbook's complex charts and graphs, so I explained them to him. We were told the Federal Reserve System would prevent depressions.

Freeing myself and my poor family from this expensive and useless education, I began to read. I learned from patriots such as Wright Patman and Louis McFadden and others about the fraudulent Federal Reserve.

There may not be time to save our economy and our sovereignty. It won't be because we didn't try. With socialist party A and socialist party B playing the blame game in the halls of Congress, the following quote from Matthew 12:25 seems appropriate: "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand."

BILL GATES AND YOUR SCHOOLS

I read with interest your articles on education in the May 17 edition. I've also read your many other articles on globalist Bill Gates and his ties to the eugenicists and Monsanto. But nowhere among your articles is anything about Gates's plans to take over education in our country.

The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation finances the Common Core Curriculum on which the 50 states have based their educational standards.

I believe this subject is of extreme importance to freedom lovers trying to rescue our nation from certain ruin, initiated by the United Nations, of which Gates is a proud member.

TWO MAJOR PARTIES GOOD FOR NOTHING

The Republicans and Democrats are totally worthless. They don't care about the common man, much less about our country. If they were real Americans, they would get rid of the Fed, kick the American Israel Public Affairs Committee out of the halls of Congress, cut foreign aid and all funding for Israel and abolish the Zionists' phony tax-exempt foundations.

Jim Traficant was the only congressman who had the courage to fight the evil system. He fought for people whose homes were being foreclosed, he fought for working people and he fought the federal government. He always did, and still does, speak his mind.

God bless him. It's time for all of us to fight back.

Last train out to get off the grid?

Amazing “Solar Generator” Is Like Having A Secret Power Plant Hidden In Your Home!

New solar powered backup provides instant electrical power in any outage or disaster. Even better...it produces an endless supply of electricity for free.

by Mike Walters
Consumer Reporter

If you have ever wanted to have an emergency “backup” system that supplies continuous electrical power, this will be the most important message you will ever read.

Here is why.

There is a now a completely portable (and ultra-high efficient) solar power generator which produces up to 1800 watts of household electricity on demand when you need it most.

The unit will supply up to twelve hours of uninterrupted backup power for a small office, and up to eight hours of runtime for essential home appliances and small electronics during a power outage. Until now, backup power products on the market have only been able to provide limited backup power for outages, and not “extended” runtime. News of this “solar backup generator” (it’s the first “off-the-grid” breakthrough in 50 years) is spreading like wild fire all across the country!

Why?

The answer is easy. You see, this solar generator is extremely powerful and yet very simple to use. It produces continuous electricity and runs with absolutely no noise whatsoever. It emits no fumes. But the best part about the solar generator is that it...

Generates Free Electricity!

Charged by the sun with a powerful solar panel, the unit then stores the power for your use when you need it. We all face natural disasters, with hurricanes, tornadoes, snow and ice storms cutting off electrical power to millions of Americans each year.

Then there are man-made disasters and outages. Blackouts and rolling brownouts are becoming common in many parts of the United States as our politicians herd us off into third-world status. And never forget the possibility of a terrorist attack directed at a few of our nation’s power plants. Since the nation’s power grids are all “connected,” crippling one plant starts a cascading downward spiral of darkness.

Your neighbors will be clueless when it finally does happen, expecting the government to “do something” to get their precious cable TV back on. The truth is, we are extremely vulnerable to all kinds of meltdowns that can create temporary or even permanent electrical outages. That’s why if you are one of the few Americans that have eyes to see and ears to hear with respect to the hard times ahead, you need to...

Have A Backup System In Place!

The solar generator kit consists of three main components which work together to create a very efficient home power plant. The massive “generator-backup”, the high efficiency solar panel, and the charge controller. In fact, when you compare a solar generator to a gas generator, the difference is pretty remarkable. Here’s why. First, gas generators make an incredible amount of racket... if you can get them started. I say that because in this part of the country (Northern Illinois), the time of year we are likely to lose our electricity is in the winter, during an ice or snow storm.

Generally the wind breaks the power lines, which get covered with ice and snow. Typically, when you lose power here, you go to the garage, roll out the generator and start pulling the cord. You pull and pull some more, all because your generator has been sitting in the cold and the carburetor is playing hard to get. This is not a lot of fun in the dark.

System includes three main components: Solar panel with portable cart, charge controller, and power plant.

Another reason to avoid gas generators is that you just can’t run one in your house. The fumes from a gas generator force you to run it outside and rely on a lot of cords coming through windows or doors to bring the power inside. Again, this is assuming you can get your gas generator started in the first place.

But the number one reason you don’t want to be caught in a time of crisis with a gas generator is...

Gas Stations Can’t Pump Gas Without Electricity!

Yes. It’s true. When the power goes out, you’re left with whatever gas you have on hand because the gas station pumps all run on electricity. A few gallons stored in a gas can means a little electricity for a little while, then it’s quickly back to black.

Look... I could go on and on about life without electricity and what a nightmare gas generators can be. But here’s the bottom line: Solutions From Science is now offering an amazing power generating system that can provide plenty of electrical power in the event of an outage or emergency. And the best part is that you can have the power safely in your house.

And, Solutions From Science can put one of these “backup” solar generators in your hands very quickly and affordably so you’ll be prepared in any crisis that comes down the road.

A True Breakthrough In Home Power Generation!

Let me try to explain the features and benefits of our solar generator as simply as possible. If I could bring one over to your house and let you start plugging in appliances, you would immediately understand what all the fuss is about. But I can’t do that. Here are some of the reasons you’ll want a solar generator:

- 1. Maximum power in minimum time. I cannot emphasize this enough. The solar generator can be set up in just a few minutes. Then, all you have to do is start plugging things in. It will run both AC & DC appliances anywhere... anytime.
- 2. Back up power when you need it most. It’s called a “solar backup” because it’s designed to come to your rescue when power trouble starts and your lights go out. Run a small refrigerator (high efficient ones are best) to keep your food from going bad.
- 3. Portable Power. If the going ever gets too tough where you are and you decide to “get the heck out of dodge,” you simply throw it in the car and take off to a safer destination, knowing you have power wherever you go.
- 4. Replaces gas generators. No noise, no fumes, no maintenance, and most importantly... no fuel required. Simply roll it to whatever location needs the power and start plugging in appliances. It has a massive maintenance-free battery as well as an indestructible outer case. (It weighs about 65 pounds.) It’s a solid piece of equipment that will last a lifetime.
- 5. Generates permanent power. The unit provides 1800 watts of electricity at peak power. That’s enough to run many appliances in your house. The unit stores power and makes it available when you need it. The generator is recharged constantly by the sun allowing you to use the system and charging it at the same time. Many users choose to keep appliances plugged in permanently to reduce electrical costs and help pay for the unit.
- 6. Multiple uses. You can use your solar backup to run essential appliances when emergencies arise. You can recharge phones, run shortwave radios, televisions, lights, fire place or furnace fans, as well as computers and printers. Plus, if you need to work in the woods at the cabin or in a boat, you can use the solar backup to run power tools, trimmers, blowers and coffee makers.
- 7. Plug and play means instant power. The emergency backup system comes ready to go. Just start plugging in your favorite household essentials...

You’ll feel a whole lot safer knowing you have a solar generator when the unexpected occurs. It could be in a storm, riot or meltdown. Unlike most “sheep-like” Americans, when the power goes out, you’ll be ready. In fact, if you’re like most Solar Generator owners, you’ll even sleep a little better knowing you still have a very reliable source of electrical power.

How much is a “plug and play” Solar Generator? Well... One pastor friend of mine told me he couldn’t even put a price on his backup system. For him it was peace of mind.

The retail price tag for this system is $2197.00.

Solar Powered Backup System Provides Instant Electrical Power In Any Outage Or Disaster.

But I’m not asking you to pay that much. Instead, I have negotiated a very special offer for my readers that include:

- 1800 watt Solar Backup Generator
- High efficiency 90 watt “quick charge” solar panel.
- Portable cart can be staked down. Summer-Winter adjustable.
- 50 feet solar panel cable.

That’s $2197.00 worth of components (at retail) in this package.

But for my readers, while the company still has inventory, you can get one for just $1697.00 plus $120.00 shipping and handling delivered anywhere in the Continental U.S. (total $1817.00).

The system is worth much more than that. But since we stumbled onto this amazing backup system, we’ve got to let everyone know about it. Especially folks who believe that life in this country is going to get much more difficult very soon. Folks who see the critical need for backup “power insurance.”

But... to get one you gotta hurry.

Here’s the deal. We have a small supply of these amazing systems in my warehouse. But with the financial meltdown on everyone’s mind, you should contact us at once to claim yours.

The absolute fastest way to order is by going to the website at:

www.mysolarbackup.com

You’ll be pleased to know that all “Solar Backup” sales are “bonded” by Buy Safe, the nation’s only on-line bonded purchase program.

If you would like to order by phone, you can call toll-free by dialing 877-327-0365. Tell whoever answers that you want the “Solar Backup Generator” system rushed to you. Or, if you prefer to pay by check or money order (payable to Solutions From Science), simply send your payment to:

Solutions From Science
Dept. Solar Backup
815 W. Main St.
P.O. Box 518
Thomson, IL 61285

Remember, your price is $500.00 off the retail price of $2197.00 at just $1697.00 plus $120.00 shipping and handling. I’m so convinced every American household needs a Solar Generator, that I’ve arranged for this special deal to get one to you at this dirt cheap price. (When you call, ask about their free shipping offer.)

Just hurry, call 877-327-0365.

Sincerely,

Mike Walters

Mike Walters

P.S. One more thing. It’s very important. I said there were a limited number available and I mean it. If Israel hits Iran or if Pakistan falls to the Taliban, the world will become unstable very quickly. Please understand how urgent this is. I believe the entire stock of Solar Generators could vanish in just a few days. I have no guarantee of getting any more of these units before a crisis hits. Even now... they’re scarce. People are starting to become afraid. Go to www.mysolarbackup.com or call 877-327-0365 right now and get one of these remarkable Solar Powered Generators. It’s the perfect emergency backup for troubled times ahead. When the lights do go out at your house... you’ll be darn glad you didn’t hesitate.
