

In this photo by Marie LeBle, a white man—of which there were plenty causing destruction—raises his taped hands as he passes a large container of garbage cans on fire. Officials and police believe much of the rioting and arson was the result of well-organized groups infiltrating peaceful protests, turning them into mindless riots.

Hands Up! Don't Loot!

Leftist media outlets downplay mayhem that was perpetrated under the cover of many peaceful protests

Looting continued for days in Manhattan after protests over the death of George Floyd turned violent. Hundreds of stores were looted in and around Union Square, as shown in this photo by Stephen Yang.

Leftist media outlets tried to blame the violence and looting on “white supremacists,” but that lie was demolished. Here a member of Antifa smashes a window so he and his pals could loot the store.

What BLM & Antifa Have Wrought

Above, an unfinished building in Minneapolis burns, set ablaze by rioters “protesting” the murder of George Floyd. The top five floors were designed as affordable housing for minority citizens, demonstrating the absolute hypocrisy of Black Lives Matter and Antifa, who helped burn the place to the ground.

A protester screams in the face of an NYPD cop. Twelve-hour shifts of extreme physical exertion in the hot Sun, multiple days in a row, with people spitting on you and throwing bricks and other dangerous projectiles: It’s a wonder why anybody would want the job.

In Los Angeles, a policeman radios fellow officers as a police car burns in the background. Those alleging that police started the rioting by using forceful tactics don’t understand how Marxist and anarchist groups incite violence themselves. Terror is their ultimate goal.

A 22-year-old black woman was killed during a protest in Davenport, Iowa, after she had joined marchers and was leaving the rally, according to a local news report. Italia Marie Kelly, according to Quad City Times, was shot and killed by a “protester,” yet most people have never heard of the tragic killing. Don’t all black lives matter?

Above, a Rochester, N.Y. couple was pummeled by a group of criminal thugs when they asked them to stop looting a business that also housed their residence. The full, horrifying video showed as many as eight men armed with metal clubs and wooden two-by-fours smashing the couple. The couple survived.

Pure rage ruled the streets, as crowds—whipped up by the racist rhetoric of such race hustlers as Al Sharpton and CNN commentator Don Lemon—pulled down, stomped and burned anything they could get their hands on.

It was a 100% off sale at this store in Rochester, N.Y., as looters—as they did in 40 cities across America—smashed shop windows and helped themselves to “free” merchandise at the expense of owners.

Above, a Philadelphia fireman tries to put out the flames engulfing a police car that has been set ablaze. In at least one incident, firefighters were unable to get to homes and businesses that had been arsoned because Black Lives Matter protesters blocked their vehicles, nearly resulting in the death of two children.

At right, a man in Dallas confronted protesters trying to loot a business. He was subsequently assaulted by the protesters with a chunk of concrete, beaten senseless and nearly killed. He was transported to an area hospital where it is said he remains in stable condition. Far right, a protester with a conscience tries to see if the Dallas man is alive or dead as a crowd looks on.

Shop after shop in Manhattan had their windows smashed and shelves stripped bare.

A Little Bit of Good News

Above, citizens in Philadelphia band together to protect a Target store in their neighborhood. Many armed citizens also stood in front of their shops to stop looters and thugs from stealing the contents of their shops and destroying their livelihoods and those of their neighbors.

The National Guard is finally leaving D.C. Here, members of the Guard march past the D.C. Guard Armory. Who knows how many historic monuments and government buildings would have been vandalized and destroyed by out-of-control rioters had Trump not urged for them to be called in.

Some protesters were peaceful, maybe even a majority of them. Here, one protester in New York offers an NYPD officer a "fist bump" in appreciation for a friendly comment. Hundreds of policemen across America are reconsidering whether they want to be cops anymore. It is rumored that 800 lawmen in New York want to work somewhere else besides for Mayor Bill DeBlasio, who is hated by cops.

Retired St. Louis Police Capt. David Dorn, 77 years old (above), was tragically gunned down by a looter as Dorn protected his friend's pawn shop. CNN refused to mention this incident for days. The only good news is that, with the help of video cameras, Stephen Cannon, 24, below, has been arrested. The blackout of Dorn's murder by leftist news media was proof that they were covering up the true nature of the riots and looting—much of it caused by their own fanning of the flames of racism night after night. CNN commentators such as Don Lemon and Chris Cuomo should be fired for the lies they have told and the constant race-baiting they engage in. It is they, not Donald Trump, who have blood on their hands.

Nation's Capital Under Siege

Above: Poor Thaddeus Kosciuszko. His monument in Washington, D.C. was vandalized with vile words, symbols and calls to kill policemen. Most of the people who protested didn't know he was a Revolutionary War hero—not a Confederate general—who asked in his will that monies should be directed for organizations dedicated to the education and manumission of enslaved people. At right, historic St. James Episcopal Church near the White House was set ablaze.

Police in Washington, D.C. man a barrier erected to keep looters and rioters from reaching residential areas. Scenes of such mayhem led President Donald Trump to offer assistance from the National Guard. Who could blame him for wanting to protect Americans from gangs of armed thugs?

Peaceful protests focused on “rampant, racially motivated police brutality,” though little really exists in America today, according to all available statistics. Here a riotous crowd of allegedly peaceful protesters gathers around a bonfire that included street signs and flammable looted materials.
